DEBRIEF

How You Think About Work

Not a score — a picture of your instincts as a manager of work.

WHAT YOU UNDERSTOOD WELL

Your strongest instinct showed up in Ownership — you tended to reason clearly about who should be responsible first.

WHERE YOU TENDED TO OVER-ASSIGN RESPONSIBILITY

There were a few moments where a single clear owner might have been enough, without needing quite as many extra steps or people involved.

WHERE YOU UNDERESTIMATED COLLABORATION

You generally brought in the right supporting teams for complex situations, even when one person could have handled the first response.

ONE INSIGHT ABOUT HOW ORGANIZATIONS ACTUALLY WORK

Many real workplace problems are solved by teams rather than individuals — ownership usually means being the first responsible person, not the only one who acts.
